A CALL FOR A CONGRESS

[illegible] week we suggested the need of a Canadian Jewish Congress. The [illegible] of the Jewish situation demands at all times the presence of an [illegible] instrument for guiding Jewish communal activity along channels of intelligent purposiveness, and also for adequately representing the attitude of the Jewish public on major issues. But, of course, in ordinary times it is difficult to rouse the Jewish masses to the appreciation of the necessity of an advanced institution like a Jewish Congress. At the present moment however, we are facing an emergency of a vital nature. Before long the Jewish world will have to make a momentous decision as to what to do with Palestine. MacDonald has virtually served notice on the Jews of the world that he has abrogated the Balfour Declaration. The Jews will have to come forward with their answer. The situation includes history-making possibilities. It behooves us therefore to be as well organized and prepared as we can possibly be.

Our friends who were active in the convoking of the first Canadian Jewish Congress no doubt realize that the present crisis in our affairs is far reaching as the one which supplied the impulse on the other occasion. We direct the call largely to them to bestir themselves and make a second attempt to create an assembly of representatives of all classes and sections of Canadian Jewry. A Jewish Congress organized and directed along the lines of the first one is vitally needed and will be of inestimable value in the present crisis.

OUR FRIENDS THE ENEMIES

We are grateful to the presiding genius of this journal for having treated us to another reprint of an article from the Pittsburg Jewish Criterion on the subject of the Zionist situation. The second article is [illegible] by Charles [illegible]. There [illegible] we hazard the suggestion that it too is a product of Mr. Joseph's authorship. We think we know Mr. Joseph's style. It has a characteristic in particular which instantly gives him away. [illegible] tendency to indulge in heroics. Mr. Joseph simply must let his readers know what a brave, courageous chap he is. Though surrounded by opponents, he nevertheless realizes that he "must pay the price of admission into journalism." Power and still more power to his pen writer.

[illegible] that we are grateful for the opportunity of reading Mr. [illegible]'s articles on Zionism. They serve a useful purpose. Reading them [illegible] the effect of strengthening our own Zionist position. Truth to say, [illegible] are not of the casehardened orthodox variety. Our good friends [illegible] Canadian Zionist administration will testify to that. We are not [illegible] moments of hesitancy. It takes intense activity in the ranks [illegible] sufficient to deaden one's moods of doubt and to stiffen one into [illegible] of complete acquiescence. No theory squares with all the [illegible] circumstances of life. There are occasions when the rough [illegible] rebel against subsumption under a theory loom large and im[illegible] our eyes, and we protest against the doctrine that would flat[illegible] under the weight of its logic. There is a fascination in the surge [illegible] life which will not be harnessed by theory, and pent in the [illegible] an organization. We are a Zionist in theory. There are

RELIGION TAKE A HOLIDAY

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

(On the Shore of Lake Michigan, Chicago, Ill.)

As these words are being perused by our few faithful and most gracious readers, we, together with a host of other rabbis and ministers, will have been started upon the first lap of our holidays,—because of which thousands of our respective congregants will declare forthwith a moratorium on religion. When the Reb's away, the flock will pray—or not,—as temples and churches become deserted and damp and mouldy through the several months of general disuse.

All of which is symptomatic of our alarming tendency in our contemporary religion, particularly within the fold of Jewry. Altogether too much of our religious activities devolve exclusively upon the rabbi. We have become a one-man faith as we permit our leader to worship God and serve man for us. We take our religious medicine vicariously, and when a much needed rest beckons our rabbis forth to vacation land only the fewest of the few faithful souls carry courageously on.

And there are many who, recognizing this patent threat of internal disintegration and decay, urge as remedy the abolition or curtailment of rabbi's holidays. For what does a rabbi do anyway that he should warrant so extensive an escape from his altogether facile tasks? He preaches once or twice a week, to be sure; occasionally he marries or buries a member of his fold; but during the balance of the time he twiddles his thumbs and all in all he leads a lovely and enviable life. In contrast to this rather universal judgment, one of our colleagues has aptly catalogued the varied functions of the modern rabbi: He is preacher. He is teacher of study groups, bible classes and aspirants to confirmation. He is superintendent of the Religious School; he is usually chief executive of the Temple Center; he is adviser to the Men's Club, Sisterhood, and Alumni. He officiates at funerals and marriages. He represents his synagogue in the Jewish community; he represents the Jewish community in the commonwealth. He is invited to address a thousand different organizations a year, and for the sake of his people he must accept. He visits the sick and the lonely with a smile upon his lips, though his bones be weary and his heart be sore. He pays a hundred times more condolence calls than any member of his congregation. He sits on boards of directors of philanthropic, social service, educational and cultural institutions. He performs a multitude of duties of which the public never hears.

And out of all this hectic storm and stress of manifold activities, he strives strenuously to snatch a second's serious study. But first he must keep in touch with the new books, the current periodicals and the daily newspapers, Jewish and general. If he has a penchant for the pen he writes editorial columns and comments. His work begins early in the morning when the telephone begins to ring and it does not end until late into the night, when, wearily, he trudges home from some fatiguing meeting, or when, far into the wee sma' hours, he falls asleep over his papers or his books.

On the week-ends, when other men seek relaxation in golf or cards, he is either preaching or attempting to bring order into a chaos of children who for generations have deemed the Religious School a place for sport.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago Packard adopted a distinctive style of hood and radiator design. Changed slightly in dimensions as powerplant needs have increased, it is still distinctly Packard.

There are but few cars nowadays which bear even the slightest family resemblance to their ancestors. In the rush to produce a new model every year and to make cars to fit all sizes of pocket-books, styles and even names have changed. The ordinary car you buy today may be hopelessly out of date tomorrow.

But Packard has created an enduring style. You may buy a Packard car, whether new or used, with the assurance that it will always be recognized as a Packard, and that you will always be proud of it.

The Street of Chains

By Lilian Lauferty

By Arrangement with Harper and Brothers.

Then he went on with the Gruenturm Saga:

"In the year 1750 Dovid Moische, son of Nathan of Breslau, came to Frankfort. He went to live in the Judengasse, the street where the City Fathers had decreed that the Children of Israel must dwell. By day Dovid Moische and his neighbors were permitted to leave their quarters and go down to the river front to sell their goods. They hawked their wares from street to street because they were not allowed to have stalls in the market. All the peddlers of the Judengasse worked from dawn to dusk.

"Dovid Moische toiled hardest and longest of all the Jews because he had seven children to feed, and only the youngest was a son. He toiled for the money to send that son to Koln, where the rich Pragers had long ago promised that if God ever blessed Dovid Moische with a man-child they would teach the boy banking. So Dovid Moische cried his wares until his voice was thick and heavy like the voices of the hucksters who come in the spring to sell early strawberries or buy old clothes. He kept at his selling until there was barely time to slip into the Judengasse before it was locked for the night. He never went back to the Jewish quarter until dusk was turning to black darkness. He was the most timid, perhaps, of all the men in the chained street, and so he had to fight for his son's chance to get out of the street.

"Dovid Moische refused to be conquered by his fear, and his descendants possess the earth," Granpa added with proud fervor.

The old man smiled with his lips, but his eyes took on the grave remoteness of the race which is not a nation and whose sons for centuries have never known a land that did not call them alien. He put out his hand suddenly and stroked the soft coppergold hair that clung to the proud little head of Theresa Babette. Then he went on fervently:

"It was dark inside the Street of Chains and the people huddled in their homes praying that the night would pass safely and without attack. But sometimes the chains would rattle and the gates would open and the Christian mob would rush into the Judengasse. The men of the rabble would shout that a Christian child had disappeared from the free city; they would accuse the Jews of stealing it and killing it so its innocent blood might be used in some ancient sacrifice. They would claw and tear and trample and wreck as they went about the street searching for the child. They never found it because no Gentile child had ever been brought to the Street for sacrifice; but before the mob left the Street, its gutters ran with streams of Jewish blood and the Jewish dead were piled against the houses.

"The people of the Street were always afraid. They lived in constant dread of death by massacre. They prayed God to protect them, to give them courage, to hold them steadfast in the faith until the day when the Messias should appear. And out of that street of tradition and narrow darkness came the greatest family in the world . . ."

"The Gruenturms!" Carlie cried suddenly. "The Gruenturms. And our Heritage. Oh, Granpa, how wonderful it is."

The old man turned his filmed and murky eyes on her and smiled wistfully as he said: "You are a Delavan, Charlotte. It is strange that you understand, that you feel so deeply. It has always seemed that my lovely Theresa, the likeness of my sainted mother is the one whose heart should respond."

"It is Henriette who has the hook-nose. Mine is as straight as Carlie's! Why should I feel Jewish?" Tress asked pertly.

Carlie frowned at her and spoke confidentially to Granpa: "She does understand deep inside her heart. But she's always ashamed of her nicest feelings. That's why she laughs at them. And then besides our Tress is shy, Granpa, not a bold little piece like me."

"You're the sweetest little puss!" Tress said gently. "Granpa ought to like you best."

Granpa's mouth smiled and his eyes joined in. He put out his hand and clasped Carlie's little fist inside Tress's tapering fingers. "Fidelity, Unity, Loyalty, Concord," he said. "These have made the Gruenturm family the greatest and most powerful unit in the world. If you two children of the house of Gruenturm stand together you will go far."

"Don, too," Carlie begged. "Take his hand too, Granpa."

But Tress did not ask that Henriette be included when Grandpa laid his hand above theirs and lifted his eyes as he intoned: "You are uniting in fidelity, unity, loyalty and concord. The Gruenturm Heritage has always been yours; the Gruenturm wealth will soon be yours. Adopt the motto of your house. With great fortunes there are great obligations. Never forget that your Heritage comes from the Street of Chains."

"We've got to forget," Henriette said impatiently. "We can't go around reminding everyone that one of our ancestors had the delightful name, Dovid Moische. We are Delavans too, grandfather, and I think it is very silly to forget that."

"Aie, aie! Perhaps it is," Grandpa said more to himself than to the children. "Perhaps you are Delavans after all."

"You want us to progress, to make something of our lives, don't you, sir?" Don asked eagerly. "You wouldn't really want us to live in a ghetto."

Granpa's wrinkled lids fell over his eyes. He shook his head and his lips mumbled sadly.

Tress put her hand on his arm. "Granpa, I'm glad I look like your mama. And I am going to buy you a gold-headed cane the very minute I get my share of the Heritage."

Our Friends the Enemies

moments when impulses shooting from other spheres of our interests tend to deflect us from the straight line of Zionist ideology. We believe most thinking and rather sensitive Zionists are that way. Thus our Zionism suffers loss. But reading articles of the type Mr. Joseph writes is a tonic. Mr. Joseph is not a vigorous, straightforward anti-Zionist with a positive philosophy to support him. Anti-Zionist writings backed by a profound pro-nationalist ideology are disquieting. They have an angle which for the time being compels an anti-Zionist perspective. Mr. Joseph's argumentation is puerile. It is braced on gossip. Pretending to favor the Jewish endeavor in Palestine, he nevertheless seems to make the Arab side his chief concern. The Arabs have a case no doubt. Nobody is so childish as to affirm that in any dispute one side is one hundred per cent right and the other side one hundred per cent wrong. Life's difficulties are not so simple. It is always a matter of preponderance of rightness. The situation in Palestine does not hinge on whether or not a few impetuous youths parade out of turn, or a few Polish Jews strut in Jerusalem with a possessory air. It is not a matter of the Jews having to shrivel up in Palestine so that they will not be too conspicuous in the eyes of the Arabs. It is a matter of fundamental rights. Once our rights are determined and reasserted we can take it that the Zionists, or the Jews in Palestine, the Epsteins and the Melchetts, outside of Palestine, and the Yellins in Palestine will know as much about neighborly deportment as does Mr. Joseph. We should not mind a real analysis, or sound advice—a plan, or a program from Mr. Joseph or anyone else. But we are amused when we read crisp twaddle and gossip, tinctured with malice, as an offering to the discussion. Well, if the attitude of Joseph and his brethren has not any more cogent arguments to support it than those adduced by the Pittsburg Criterion articles, we are happy that we are on the other side. It is comforting to know the weakness of the enemy.

THE AMERICAN ZIONIST CONVENTION

This week end the American Zionists will hold their annual convention, in the city of Cleveland.

The American Zionist organization is practically defunct. It had helped to create the Frankenstein of a Jewish Agency. And now its own creature has turned on it, and has helpd to put the finishing touches to its career.

Nominally the American Federation still functions. It has the outward signs of life. It has a president. It has a secretary (in exile) and a host of other bureaucrats who give it a similorcum of vitality. But it has no responsibilities. It has no duties. It has no means of carrying on work. Its functions have been taken over by the Jewish Agency. It languishes on the relic power of its former vitality.

The big issue at Cleveland will be the problem of reorganizing under a Brandeis control. The memorandum submitted by Brandeis outlining his terms sounded a bit harsh. It did not make any attempt to conceal its utter contempt for the present administration. Considering, however, the pass to which American Zionism has been brought the attitude of Brandeis is not without warrant.

Unless the return of Brandeis to the fold is rendered possible and achieved, we think American Zionism will face a very dark future. The shadow cast by the Agency will obscure it completely. Its only salvation lies in the entry of the Brandeis forces into office. Brandeis himself may not be able to do as much personally in the way of leadership as one might wish. But we have faith in his power to reorganize American Zionism through vicarious leadership. He has under his influence a host of brainy men who will rally to the cause at his request, under his personal leadership.

A Brandeis regime will restore to American Zionism its self respect, its prestige, its usefulness, all of which have been frittered away by the former administration.

Canada's Greatest Shirt Shop

A contemporary writer described Montreal the other day as the city of successes. No matter in which direction we look we see progressive movement. Stores that only a short time ago occupied two or three floors now carry on in palatial premises. Buildings of gigantic size house corporations which once needed but humble offices to accommodate them. Truly Montreal is a place of which to be proud.

One of the outstanding successes in Montreal retail trade, and one whose success has been built on a very solid foundation, is Canada's Greatest Shirt Shop, a name that has been given by Montrealer's to the well known firm of Stephen Fournier Limited. Starting with one store in the downtown financial district four years ago, this progressive firm has gradually added to its places of business and, as a culminating effort to serve its customers with the highest type of service, but a few days ago opened what is without doubt the finest and newest men's wear store in Montreal in the newly completed University Tower Building.

Thus Canada's Busiest Store identifies itself with Canada's busiest corner.

The interior of the store has been beautifully designed in woods of a natural tint. Fixtures and fittings have been made to match and patterned in a modern style. Five extensive windows allow of the ample display of merchandise and, in the evening, brilliant neon signs call the attention of passers by to the store. Beneath the store is a specially equipped stock room of five or six times the extent of the main store. This being necessary on account of the gigantic turnover in merchandise that takes place each month. Goods are received in this stock department from all over the world in huge quantities and are there examined, checked and ticketed before being placed ready to refill the shelves in the store above.

It was originally intended that this lower floor should also accommodate the sign department which now occupies a special downtown building and where the attractive window cards, which have now become such a feature in every Fournier store, are made. This project had to be abandoned however on account of the large shipments of goods that have been already bought and received. It was found impossible to house anything after these shipments had filled the available space.

In speaking of the success of the firm, Mr. Fournier is most modest. "There is no secret about this success," he said in answer to a question. "We based our policy on the assumption that the average man appreciates a square deal. And we have found it to be true." Certainly, by the appearance of the crowded stores under Mr. Fournier's management, one would judge that a "square deal" was just what every one got there.

"You see how Tress feels!" Carlie exulted. "She thinks of you first, Grampa, just the way your sainted mother would have done."

Grampa smiled. His eyelids lifted and his eyes shone. "It is Charlotte who understands," he said. "And Charlotte will never forget. If one of you remembers, the Heritage is safe."

It was as if he had laid his hands on Carlie in blessing.

CHAPTER IV

Grampa claimed that the Gruenturm Saga he loved to tell the children was a strict compilation of facts. It had, nevertheless, the essence of romance that lies in every history of conquest. It dealt with some of those men who are overlords of circumstances. Dick Whittington becoming Lord Mayor of London, Caesar crossing his Rubicon, Jack slaying his Giant, David Moische fighting to free his son from the chains that held him in bondage—all are part of a brotherhood of fact and fancy, symbols even more than figures in the pageant of man's rise above the limitations of self to his heritage of dominion over all the earth.

The Gruenturm dynasty began in 1780 when Moses David, only son of David Moische, peddler of the Street of Chains, was sent to study banking in Koln. The boy loved coins; he traded in new coins and studied old ones and became known as a numismatist before he gained standing as a banker. Within a year of his obscure return to the house of his father, the Margrave of a neighboring province had a dispute with the Count of another march over a dingy bit of copper that was perhaps a sesterce of ancient Rome and possibly of Ionian origin. Young Moses David was recommended as an authority and was summoned to give an opinion.

When the young Jew came to the old schloss, he was ushered into the Tower room where the Margrave and the Count were whiling away the time in a game of chess. Moses David forgot his errand, forgot his humble position, and saw only the chessboard with the ivory pieces of the game that represented the second of his great passions. He stepped to a position behind the Margrave's chair, studied the board for a moment and then whispered in his host's ear:

"If His Highness will make the moves I beg leave to suggest, he shall cry 'check' at the third and 'mate' at the fourth move."

The Margrave won the game and young Moses David won a powerful patron. A sign soon swung outside the narrow house in the Judengasse. It was a chessboard of black and white squares and it bore a green tower painted against the chequered background. It amused and flattered the Margrave to find that the boy from the Ghetto regarded him (and his green tower and chessboard) with awe and reverence and somewhat as patron saints. In judging the powerful and wealthy prince and his reactions to what a pettier man might have considered impertinent, Moses David showed the instinctive diplomacy which all save one of his blood were said to inherit.

That one was Henrietta, orphan daughter of one of Moses David's six sisters; he took the child into his house at about the time he took his name from the sign above it and became Gruenturm the Banker. Henrietta grew to womanhood in the now famous house where the three sons of Moses David and his wife, Theresa, were trained to carry on the business in which the father had prospered almost from the moment when he won the Margrave's game of chess.

In 1806 the city was given to a rival power. Napoleon had already annexed the German states to France; the Margrave was the Corsican's enemy and the advocate of the union for which Germany would not be ready for another half century; Napoleon's victories compelled the Margrave to flee his mediatised province and to leave his old schloss of the green tower—and, his enemies hoped, to abandon his fabulous wealth. But Moses David had for some years foreseen the triumph of the Corsican. So, secretly, and in preparation for events as they culminated, the treasure of the Margrave had been transferred to the house of Grunturm long before the prince abandoned his castle.

Perhaps the vision of Moses David encompassed the day when with coins for men and the world for a chessboard, his sons would move the armies of the earth by the power of their gold; certainly he recognized that in his sons he had three powerful pieces to handle; and as [illegible] sent Adam, the oldest [illegible] the Gruenturm became [illegible] if he had been fed on escargots from infancy. [illegible] second son was dispatched to London; Michael David, your [illegible] and most dearly beloved, was [illegible] of his father's side in Germany. [illegible] having made his preliminary move[illegible] Moses David's plan to strengthen [illegible] still further by an [illegible] with the most powerful banker [illegible] who had a daughter just [illegible] Whereupon it was revealed that Michael was passionately in [illegible] Henrietta, his lovely orphan cousin.

Without a moment's delay Henrietta was sent to [illegible] in Paris. She plied and mopped [illegible] day and night. Adam was a patron of the arts and was at once kind and affable, generous and [illegible]. He loved to see his young cousin [illegible] and he felt that if Henrietta were [illegible] herself and step out of [illegible] fountain of tears, she might take charge of his house and save him [illegible] housekeeper's salary. To cure his guest of her [illegible] and haunting memories, Adam took her to the Comédie Française to see Mlle. Mars and the great Talma. He invited Chateaubriand and Rousseau and the boy Louis [illegible] to his house. Henrietta sat [illegible] night after night between [illegible] and behind the chairs of Meissonier and the products of the most expert chef in Paris. She was [illegible] to Mme. de Staël and the great [illegible], Louis David, who enlivened the evenings with grim memories of his friend Robespierre. Adam's guests were charmed by his beautiful young protégée, they paid her lavish attentions. She had everything to enjoy except the one thing she craved, and she enjoyed nothing except her own misery.

BUILDING REVIEW

The outstanding feature of the spring and summer building programme is the number of communal buildings which will shortly be erected. The new Jewish Hospital to be erected on Cote des Neiges at a cost of over a million dollars is of course of major interest. In the department of endeavour are the new structures erected for the sanatorium at Prefontaine in the Laurentians, the new home of the Laurentian Fresh Air Camp at Lac Lachigan, and the new buildings erected for the Bnai Brith Camp at Lac Long. The fact that buildings are tending towards the highly modern and most pleasing is gratifying. In the north end of the city the New Synagogue has already been started and will be a structure worthy of those who are teaching and studying the Talmud.

Many new residences are being planned in Outremont and on the slopes of Westmount. On Cote des Neiges Road, I. Gersovitz will erect one of the finest apartment houses that Montreal has yet seen. Many apartment structures are being erected in every section of the city. The Laing Construction Company, true pioneers in the building industry, recently completed a group of twelve lovely cottages on Kingsley Avenue, in Westmount. The new Montreal Dairy and Ice Cream Plant are splendid examples of the fine industrial plants which are developing. At Cap de la Madeleine, in Quebec, which is a manufacturing centre, new factories are being thought of. The Hermitage, a beautiful land mark at the corner of Barnside and Peel Street and will occupy as much space as it now covers. On the whole construction work in and about Montreal is particularly active this summer with an even more ambitious programme for the Autumn.

M. [illegible] who completed for Mr. [illegible] a group of 24 apartments of three, four and five rooms, 4596—4598 Decarie Boulevard, Cote St. Luke Road and [illegible] Junction, is now planning a neighbouring structure of 32 apartments of four and five rooms. September 15th occupation. The group adapted from Spanish architecture in multicolored brick by M. [illegible]hof, architect, and is valued at $35,000.

The Construction Company has completed a group of modern cottages on [illegible] between Cedar and Queen Mary Road, for sale at $15,500 each. Canadian Industries Limited recently announced the awarding of the contract for the erection of their new fertilizer plant at Beloeil, Que. The industry is to manufacture mixed fertilizer and superphosphate. Erection of the necessary buildings and installation of machinery is estimated to cost $45[illegible]. It is hoped to have the plant producing in September of this year.

BAILEY FEED-WATER REGULATOR

The Bailey Regulator is thermo-hydraulically operated and consists of two parts, the generator and the regulating valve. The generator is designed to give immediate and positive action of the regulating valve with changes in boiler water level.

The Bailey Regulating Valve is of the tight seating, fully balanced type with multiple V-shaped port restrictions designed to give the desired characteristic flow curve which is determined by weighed water tests. The entire seating arrangement consisting of the valve cage and the one moving part, the valve disc, can be removed from the valve body without removing the body from the pipe line.

A VERY IMPORTANT FEATURE OF THE BAILEY FEED-WATER REGULATOR IS THAT THE REGULATING VALVE MAY BE INSTALLED ANY PLACE IN THE BOILER FEED LINE EITHER VERTICAL OR HORIZONTAL.

Our engineers are available at any time to discuss your feed-water control problems.

J. Gersovitz and Rabinovitch recently finished a fine structure on de l'Epee Avenue, Park Extension.

Cap de la Madeleine, which is justly popular as a manufacturing centre, reports splendid building activity. The erection of a three storey brick factory costing $25,000 on St. Maurice Street is contemplated. Building will be 60 by 100 ft. Trustee and engineer, R. Morrissette. The erection of a $20,000 factory on St. Madeleine Street is contemplated. Building will be of brick, two storeys in height and 45 by 100 ft. Trustee and engineer, R. Morrissette.

Work started on the New Hebrew Education Centre, corner St. Joseph Blvd., and Jeanne Mance, with Joseph Cohen, Dr. H. Abramowitz, Lyon. Cohen, Rabbi H. Cohen and B. Levitt presiding at the official breaking of ground on Sunday, June 15.

$1,550,000 BUILDING FOR ARCHITECTS

Costing a total of $1,550,0000, the new sixteen-storey Architects' Building, which shortly is to be constructed at the corner of Beaver Hall Hill and Dorchester street, will fill a long-felt want by supplying the architectural profession and building construction interests of the city with a group of centralized offices and studios, such as are already supplied in most of the more important United States cities.

The structure, which has been designed by Ross and Macdonald, architects of this city, will take the form of a tower set back from the streets, lane and adjoining property on all four sides, so as to afford the maximum amount of light to all rentable areas, and has been specifically designed to [illegible] working conditions for [illegible] and engineers. The property has a frontage of 70 feet on Beaver Hall Hill and 100 feet on Dorchester street, both of which thoroughfares are to be widened as a part of civic improvement.

Towering sixteen stories above the sidewalk, the new structure will have in addition three storeys of garage space underground, making eighteen storeys in all. The building will be the full size of the lot, approximately 70 feet by 100 feet to the height of the 12 storeys, and will then be set back on the two long sides about seven feet, leaving a tower-like shaft rising 12 storeys above the main block of the structure with further setbacks on the 10th, 13th and 15th floor levels. There will be stone elevation on all four elevations for the full height, with the specification to windows worked out in cast metal work, the whole design being treated in a restrained modern style. The windows will be steel casement the double hung or the casement type, according to location and requirements, the first and second storey windows on the street fronts being large show windows with ornamental bronze or metal frames.

The entrances, entrance hall, and elevator hall will be carried out in bronze and marble, designed to harmonize with the exterior of the building. From the street floor and from each of the garage floors tenants will be carried to the upper floors by three high-speed elevators with automatic control and self-leveling devices and every modern improvement. One of the elevators will run express to the top floors. The elevator halls on the upper floors will have marble floors and finish. The offices will be finished and decorated in absolutely the latest style. On the higher floors large suites will be reserved for architects' offices. Needless to say the building will be fire proof throughout.

Do you start with a smile?

HERE'S the way to start the day with a smile . . . and keep the folded features the whole twenty four hours.

Dress well.

Leave your bed and take a peep at yourself . . . your pajamas look like something real . . . smart . . . stylish . . . You feel proud of yourself and you look forward to dressing.

You don underwear that you know will be comfortable . . . hosiery that you'll not be ashamed of . . . a shirt of fashionable shade and comfortable cut . . . a collar that makes you proud of your neck . . . a tie that just matches.

From your garters to your hatband you know you are dressed right . . . and you start the day with a stout heart.

And when you add to this satisfaction the knowledge of economic purchase at Stephen Fournier Limited . . . well . . . no wonder the day goes well.

The plant has three stories above the ground, but it has been designed for many more stories. The first two floors being devoted to manufacture of commercial apparatus and the Marconi Receiving Sets Administration offices and engineering staff occupy the third floor.

Every facility for the manufacture and testing of scientific radio and wireless apparatus has been embodied in the new plant. Research, electro-plating, core-winding, etc., all have special rooms.

Another feature of the building is the aerials on the roof, from which wireless lead-ins will be used for experimental work. The new building is equipped further with special ventilators, freight and automatic passenger elevators. To cope with fire contingencies, special fire-proof stair-towers are isolated from the building. Wall construction is of Haydite, a material 50% lighter and 30% stronger than cement. A sunken yard enables trucks to level with shipping doors.

In building their new plant, the Canadian Marconi Company enjoys the distinction of being the only Canadian radio company with research, engineering, experimental and testing departments all under one roof.

CONCRETE

Construction Assures Permanent, Fire-Safe Schools and Hospitals

Erected largely through public or subscribed funds and housing as they do, so many comparatively defenceless people, schools and hospitals must above all else, be built for permanence and fire-safety.

Concrete construction assures these vital factors besides permitting wide architectural scope without undue cost.

Concrete is quick and easy to build with and eliminates material-shortage delays. Its principal component, "Canada Cement" is always available in any quantity.

We maintain a service department to co-operate with you in all kinds of work for which concrete is adapted. Our library is unreservedly put at your disposal at all times, without charge. Write us.

DOMINION ENGINEERING

It is learned that Dominion Engineering Works, Limited, has secured the contract for the turbine installation at the Chats Falls development on the Ottawa River. It is estimated that the value of this contract will be in the neighborhood of $700,000, which should be an excellent addition to the Engineering Company's log of business.

WESTERN STEEL PRODUCTS

Net profit, after all deductions of $491,738 is shown in the annual report of Western Steel Products for the year ended December 31st, 1929, presented at the annual meeting here by R. R. Symington, president.

Operating profit for 1929 is shown as $688,347; bond interest $67,571; income taxes, $57,538; preferred dividends $71,500.

Announcement was made of the formation of Corporate Steel Products, Limited, with head office in Montreal, to centralize administration, facilitating and co-ordinate certain departments of the business and to effect extensive economies in operation.

CONSOLIDATED BAKERIES

Consolidated Bakeries, in which Ogilvie Flour Mills are interested, have cut their dividend covering the second quarter of the current year. This is contained in the declaration of a 25 cent dividend payable on July 2nd in place of the previous rate of 50 cents a quarter. It is understood that this action was taken in view of the generally unsatisfactory business conditions, severe competition and overproduction experienced.

ALGOMA STEEL

Funds for the initial work on the new Algoma Steel Corporation rail mill have been obtained by Lake Superior Corporation, the holding company, through the recent sale of the company's holdings of Algoma Eastern Railway stock to the Canadian Pacific Railway. Contracts for the new structure are now being placed it is understood and work will begin immediately.

Canada Car Likely to Show Higher Earnings for Current Year

WITH the third quarter of its fiscal year ending on June 30th, Canadian Car & Foundry in the current fiscal year bids fair to exceed the record showing, from the standpoint of business handled and earnings for the twelve months ended September 30, 1929. In that period profits available against the common stock were equivalent to $6.78 per share on the present no par value capitalization.

A feature of the current year's activities is the fact that the large carry-over of orders and contracts closed in the interval since the last annual report has made possible continuous operations of the company's plants for the entire period to date. This is in contrast to the previous year when the company only started working on the large orders secured in 1929 several months after the beginning of the year. Added to this has been the heavy volume of orders for specialties turned out by the truck and bolster shops and the different plants of Canadian Steel Foundries.

In regard to future business, interests close to the company express the view that the Canadian railways will again be in the market for equipment by the time the next fiscal year gets under way. It is understood that in view of the requirements to meet modern traffic conditions, many cars have become obsolete and will have to be replaced. For this reason a policy of gradual scrapping of old equipment is being followed by the railways, which, it is stated, have formulated plans calling for an annual schedule of renewals covering the next five years. Next year the Interstate Commerce Commission ruling against exchange of cars of wooden construction comes into effect, which will necessitate withdrawal from service of many cars on Canadian railways, where the proportion of this class of equipment in use is still large.

Mining & Oil

TECK HUGHES MINES

Profits from current operations at the Teck-Hughes mine are averaging approximately $250,000 per month. The construction soon to begin and which will be completed during the second quarter of 1931 is calculated to increase profits to at least $333,000 monthly.

These estimates are made after making allowances for depreciation, taxes and all contingencies. They indicate the approximate amount reasonable to expect for either treasury surplus or dividends.

McINTYRE PORCUPINE

Officials of McIntyre Porcupine Mines, Limited, have announced a new mill, with a capacity of 2,000 tons is to be constructed at once in the vicinity of the No. 11 shaft on their northern Ontario property.

A new drybouse will be erected, it was said, and the office and shops removed from their present location. The present mill has been operating at about 1,500 tons daily and when the new mill is completed, the present one will be salvaged. The new flotation process with which McIntyre engineers have been experimenting, will be used in the proposed mill.

ABANA MINES

With development work at Abana Mines brought to a point where the mine is now at a production stage from the 550-foot level, it is reported that a complete report has been prepared of operations carried out in the last six months. The report, it is understood, shows a marked increase in the proven and indicated ore reserves, which are now estimated to be approximately $22,500,000. This compares with the last official estimate of $11,500,000, and covers mainly the showings in the west side of the dyke, where work has been concentrated in developing the main ore body. The figure quoted is said to represent tonnage disclosed by drilling to the 800-foot level. In addition, holes sunk all the way down to 1,250 feet show a continuation of the ore body with no diminution in width.

AMULET MINES

An announcement made by officials of Amulet Mines, Ltd. sets at rest the rumors that have been passing around during the past two or three days to the effect that plans were under consideration to suspend operations.

In an interview with one of the directors it was learned that both the mine and mill are running smoothly and satisfactorily. Since its completion the mill has been turning over without a hitch, and handling from 300 to 325 tons of ore daily, averaging around 8,500 to 9,000 tons per month.

BIG MISSOURI

It is understood on good authority that developments are progressing favorably on the Big Missouri, consisting of diamond drilling and drifting. The drills are being worked in three shifts. This work, we understand, is being confined to a systematic exploration of the large silicified porphyry shear.

HOME OIL

Home No. 5 well is now about 100 feet in the lime, according to reports, and is drilling at a total depth of about 4,579 feet.

LOWERY PETROLEUM

Lowery Petroleum is reported to have produced 400 barrels recently, an increase over previous recovery.

CALMONT OILS

Calmont No. 2 is reported to be still going full strength, and is now on six separators with 1,150 pounds back pressure. The company is withholding figures until the full recovery for at least a full day has been taken. Present back pressure is judged right for the elimination of freezing and it is expected steady production can be maintained.

Out of 153 stores of Consolidated Food Products, Ltd. over 100 carry the Stop and Shop sign. Of these 28 stores are in Toronto. It is understood that the remaining stores operating under the Arnold system will be converted into Stop and Shop stores, in which have been developed the most modern chain methods and equipment.

TIP TOP TAILORS

Sales of Tip Top Tailors, Ltd. for the five months ended May 31st, amounted to $1,993,992, as compared with $1,823,744 in the corresponding period of 1928, representing an increase of $170,248, or 9.3%.

Such an increase is noteworthy in view of the so-called period of business depression.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor,
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

In time for the Chicago convention and the International Convention of the Rotary Club a resolution passed by the Rotary Club Council of Montreal urges an international survey of the school text books of each country with a view to presenting warfare in its true light. This survey would take note of mischievous and misleading information about the other races and countries of the world. It would report on historical statements at variance with the facts and statements which distort the view for those in their formative years. The special purpose of this survey would be to understand the effect upon youth of the method of presentation of ancient feuds and wars which always glorifies war. The report on the survey would make recommendations concerning historical records which misrepresent present-day characteristics.

There is nothing new about the gist of this resolution moved by the Rev. Dr. E. Leslie Pidgeon but there is something significant about the fact that the resolution was passed by a Rotary club. Most of the peace resolutions and efforts have been passed and undertaken by women's peace leagues and other organizations dedicated specifically to the decline of warfare and preparedness. No matter how strong the language of their resolutions nor how impassioned their addresses have been, a certain note of futility has marked their activities. But the Rotary Club represents a stratum of big business. It is better able to exercise practical influence in preventing the minds of the youth from being corrupted by national hatreds and false ideals. If it wants to it can achieve concrete work upon the wordy foundations which have been prepared for years by the peace leaguers. The action of the Rotary Club of Montreal is the first of its kind to be taken up by such an organization from an international standpoint. It will cheer those who believe that the promotion of world peace rests upon education.

The London Jewish Chronicle makes editorial note of the fact that Rabbi Francis Cohen, of Sydney, recently appeared as an arbiter of women's dress. It seems that a young lady who was soon to be married was rehearsing the performance with her eight bridesmaids when the rabbi objected to the low-cut backs of all the dresses. A dressmaker was hurried in bearing pieces of tulle which were inserted in the dresses to minimize the expanse of skin visible. All went well then and the bride and groom were united in holy wedlock and should be living happily ever after. There is a moral in this for rabbis on this side of the water. With reforms in the marriage ceremony so easy to institute why not combine to introduce a few more? For example, a great advance could be made by eliminating the songs "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly" and "Because" from the wedding scene. All of them are silly, sentimental in expression, set to poor music, moreover, and borrowed from the Gentiles. If there must be these adornments to the marriage ceremony why not sing Jewish songs at Jewish weddings? They are better songs and because they are more fitting are in better taste.

According to a report rendered to the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society by J. Lutzki, of Buenos Aires, there is still one place where immigration is practically unrestricted. It is Chile, the only South American country where this condition obtains. Mr. Lutzki's report says that 1,000 or 1,500 Jewish immigrants could be absorbed there annually. Between 1,000 and 1,200 families are already there of whom 200 are of Sephardic descent. There are 800 Jewish families in Santiago the population of which is 600,000. A Jewish center is being completed there and that Jewish community and the one in Valparaiso are well organized. The oldest settlers are prominent in the commercial life of the cities and the new arrivals are peddlers selling goods on the weekly installment plan. There are no workingmen and the professional men, as in other established Jewish communities, are the sons of older settlers. The country is growing and the climate is one of the best in the world. There is no unemployment among skilled workers and there is a great demand for tailors, hatmakers, upholsterers and all those who work in the building trades. News of this sort is always of moment to the ever wandering Jew. It is given here because it is not on flying rumour but from a reputable investigator sent by Him to spy out the land.

From Our Contemporaries

The Detroit Jewish Chronicle says:

Shakespeare said there is nothing in a name, but judging by the way many Jews rush to have their Jewishly-sounding names changed there must be a whole lot to nomenclature.

A number of writers have recently discussed this tendency at name-changing in a series of articles in the Jewish press, and a writer in the Yiddish Forward went so far as to charge that the changing of one's name is a sign of the person's being ashamed of his race. Said Nathaniel Zalowitz in the Forward:

> We are, all of us, either foreigners or the descendants of foreigners; in every instance our surname "betrays" the country whence we or our ancestors emigrated. The United States is made up of many people; the Yankee, in spite of the Ku Klux Klan, has not exclusive title to this soil. Even the proud Cabots of Boston trace their ancestry to John and Sebastian Cabot, who were Italians in the service of an English king, just as Christopher Columbus was an Italian. When Levy becomes Le Vey, does he thereby get a French ancestry? When Schwartz becomes Black man, does he at the same time acquire an Anglo-Saxon family tree?

This would be a sensible argument in favor of Jews retaining their Jewish names. The Cohens and the Levys and the Abrahams and the Gideans, when they adopt names to disguise their Jewishness, betray their people. But what about Jews who come here to adopt the United States as their homeland, but whose names are nevertheless foreign-sounding, revealing not an ancestry of prophets and priests but of people who at one time or another massacred Jews? Are we to blame these whose names end with 'vitch and 'sky for adopting a name to correspond with the nomenclature of the adopted country?

Somehow we fail to agree with those who place a label of treason upon name-changers, in instances where the names were originally non-Jewish, and where the intention is to get the name to correspond with their newly-adopted Americanism. Only when the priestly name of Cohen, or the traditional name of the Levites, is given up, it is difficult to excuse the action.

This business of changing names is not without its humor. One wonders will no doubt get a kick out of the following news item that appears in the New York Herald-Tribune:

> From the name Babitsky to Babbitt was the legal course taken in Elizabeth, N. J., by Solomon Babitsky, 28 year old, and his two brothers, Abraham, 25, and Max, 21. The brothers appeared before County Judge Thompson in Common Pleas Court and asked that the change be made to "facilitate our business operations."
> "Have you ever read the novel 'Babbitt,' the supposedly typical go-getter business man?" Solomon Babitsky was asked.
> "No, I've been too busy, but I've heard about him," he replied. "I'm with a shoe concern now that operate 31 stores in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and if the original Babbitt goes any further than we do he'll have to hurry."
> Solomon Babitsky—or Babbitt—told the court that in signing the charter of the shoe corporation he used the name Babbitt. His brother Abraham is associated with him while Max is manager of a chain grocery in Roselle, N. J., near Linden. He said he might as well be named Babbitt—everybody was calling him that anyway.
> They were not joined in the petition by a younger brother, Morris Babitsky, a minor, who is now a student in a school of chiropody in Chicago. It would have been necessary to have named a guardian for him for the change.

But the question remains: what if Kabotchnik does become Cabot, and Babitsky Babbitt, when the intonation of the voice will not yield to legal change, and the curve of the nose refuses to relax, and that well savoring pudding known as "kugel" continues to draw to the Sabbath table?

The Employment Service of Canada is maintained by the Federal and Provincial Governments to serve the public.

In Toronto separate departments of the Ontario Government Public Employment Offices are operated for men and women workers. Last year approximately 24,000 placements of men and boys and 20,000 placements of women and girls were made in various kinds of employment through these two offices.

Employers who are interested in securing workers with special mechanical, technical or clerical experience are invited to call on the superintendents of these offices and thus establish direct contact with the Employment Service. Workers seeking employment should register and make their wants known.

Prompt and efficient service is rendered without charge to employer or worker.

"The most imaginative men always study the hardest and are the most thirsty for new knowledge. Fancy plays like a squirrel in its circular prison and is happy, but imagination is a pilgrim on the earth — and her home is in heaven. Shoe her from the fields of the celestial mountains — bar her from breathing their lofty, sun-warmed air — and we may as well turn upon her the last bolt of the Tower of Famine and give the keys to the empire of the wildest surge that washes Cyprus and Gorgona."

FRATERNAL SOFTBALL

One of the feature games of the League took place last Friday night when Beal Brith won over I.O.F. by the close score of 2 to 1, Wilson twirling the best game of his career, allowing only six hits, of which Brown and English had two each. Manilla for the Foresters was slightly the better in control, walking none. Judeans in the late game won 11 to 1, the Dukes scoring their lone run, when Charrenduff tripled off Robinson, who held them scoreless after this blow. The standout catches were made by Dog for Beal Brith in the early game, and Sammy Starr in the other affair. For the rest of the season the League will play double-headers each Friday night, and the schedule for the same will be published shortly.

No regular games will be played next week, Tuesday being Dominion Day, but on Friday night July 4th the annual game between Buffalo Weidmanns, and the Beal Brith, in aid of the Beal Brith Boys' Camp, will take place. Latest averages as released by the League Secretary, shows IOF Manilla, the sterling twirlers of the Foresters, in first place among those who have been at bat 10 times, followed by Baylen of the same team. FINE SCREEN FARE TO BE OFFERED
"Caught Short" Is Comedy Wow

Marie Dressler with her famous sidekick, Polly Moran, will be the de luxe laugh attraction at Loew's Theatre next week, for this illustrious duo will rock the screen with their all talking extravaganza of Wall Street—"Caught Short".

The blithe Marie and the woe begone Polly show the world what happens to a couple of nice girls when the market begins to skid, and in this latest and greatest comedy feature they show what fun is too. The inimitable pantomime of the two are not lost in articulation, their flaire for comedy is at its best in the ludicrous situations which attend their skirmishes in the financial merry go round.

Gracing the boards with his engaging and unique personality, Little Jack Little, will top the vaudeville show "the great radio star and Columbia recording artist remains" yours very truly" and offers his own clever ekle of songs and stories.

Carlton Emmy and his Mad Wage, in a most artistic comedy offering, Frank Dobson offering that great laugh getter "The Love Doctor" with Miriam Suayers and the Winter Garden Girls, Revel Brothers and Red with Donia and Clark round out a smart hot weather bill, which preserves the consistent high standard of entertainment associated with the programs offered at this popular theatre.
